Partners Building a Literate Community

Washtenaw Literacy's mission is straightforward, but it challenges a complex problem. Adults with low-basic skills most often stay in the shadow unless a crisis -- unemployment, incarceration, health issues -- forces illiteracy to daylight.

For fifty years, Washtenaw Literacy has provided a path for low-literate neighbors by responding to their individual needs. Washtenaw Literacy's programs have a near 100% success rate. Achievements include getting a job or promotion, acquiring a high school credential, opening a bank account, reading prescriptions, helping children with schoolwork, moving out of homelessness, becoming a U.S. citizen, voting for the first time, or communicating in English.

Our anniversary is a springboard to the future.

Washtenaw Literacy's Anniversary campaign, Building the Next Fifty Years, challenges partners to give 50th-anniversary support in honor of Michigan's oldest literacy agency by making a first-time gift or increasing your previous commitment by 50% or five times greater. This once-a-century campaign will build a technology infrastructure, workspaces, and sustainability that is ready for the future, extending our reach and lifting more neighbors. Your partnership kicks it off as a founding supporter.

Literacy is a fundamental tool for self-determination and a cornerstone to equity. Improved literacy is proven to influence the academic achievement of future generations positively.

Our partnership upends systemic poverty and gives words to those in our community who often do not have a voice or access to opportunity.
